ABSTRACT

This booklet provides a guide to some of the credit-bearing opportunities in place at more than 1,200 United States colleges and universities that recognize learning obtained away from the formal college classroom. The data were compiled from a fall 1984 survey and are presented in two sections. The first provides the programmatic information itself in alphabetical order by state and, within each state, in alphabetical order by college. In this section, a matrix identifies possible opportunities for credit: national standardized examinations, recommendations by the American Council on Education, Advanced Placement Program, assessment by portfolio, institution-specific tests, oral interviews, and demonstration of competencies. The second section contains the names and addresses of all of the colleges and universities listed in the matrix. (JDD)

Preface

It is always a risky business to publish programmatic information about U.S. colleges and universities, even when they supply it themselves. No sooner is the information in print, then it is out of date. Few things seem to change as quickly or as quietly on college campuses as opportunities for recognizing learning obtained away from the formal college classroom.

Nevertheless, the information contained in this booklet is intended to provide the reader with a guide to some of the credit-bearing opportunities reportedly in place at more than 1,200 colleges and universities in the United States. College administrators and faculty frequently write to us to learn about what other institutions in their regions are doing or what like institutions across the country are offering in the way of credit-bearing opportunities for adults. More frequently, adult learners themselves write wanting information that will aid them in locating the educational institutions and programs best suited to their needs and backgrounds. We believe that the information contained in this booklet should help both groups.

These data were compiled from a CAEL survey conducted by Valerie McIntyre Sherwood in the fall of 1984 and are presented in two sections. The first provides the programmatic information itself by college in alphabetical order by state. The possible opportunities for credit have been identified in the matrix as follows:

A = National standardized examinations such as the College-Level Examinations Program (CLEP), the ACT-Proficiency Examination Program (ACT PEP) and DANTES

B = Recommendations by the American Council on Education (ACE) as provided in the Guide to Evaluation of Educational Experiences in the Armed Forces

C = Recommendation by ACE as provided in the Guide to Educational Programs in Non-Collegiate Sponsored Instruction

D = Advanced Placement Program

E = Assessment by Portfolio

F = Faculty made tests or challenge examinations (institutional specific)

G = Oral interviews

H = Demonstration of competencies

I = other

We recognize that some of these options, oral interviews and the demonstration of competencies, for example, may, in fact, be a part of some institutions' programs in portfolio assessment. Readers are encouraged to write to the colleges in which they are most interested to obtain more specific information about the procedures and policy for each program.

Each institution reporting 25 students or more in these programs during 1984 has been identified with an asterisk (*).

The second part of the booklet contains the names and addresses of all of the colleges and universities listed in the matrix, again in alphabetical order by state.

The reader is encouraged to let us know of changes -- additions, deletions, address corrections, etc. We hope to update this listing annually and would welcome comments and suggestions for making it more useful and as concrete as possible.

Our appreciation is extended to Matt Levitt and Michael B. Morucci for their patience and good humor in preparing this document and to Barbara Ackerman and Rochell Jacobs for their valuable assistance with the proofreading.
